WCCW writers take top honors

Four White County Creative Writers were among the winners of Del Garrett's Triple Scoop writing contest.

Gary Breezeel won a first place prose award for his story, A Day I'll Never Forget. Kim Vernon took second place for Christmas Coup. Lilly Hobbs won first honorable mention for The Judge, second honorable mention for Thicker Than Water, and third honorable mention for Beanie and Braden.

In the poetry contest, Vernon took first place for Arkansas and third place for Silence in the Country. Hobbs took second place for Ulysses the Liar and first honorable mention for Martin's Dream is Not My Dream. John McPherson won second honorable mention for Desert Metamorphosis and third honorable mention for Rotten Potatoes.

"I had fun running this contest," Garrett said, "and I plan to do it again next year."

Applications will be available at the Arkansas Writers' Conference and the White County conference.

Plots thicken: Members to read working outlines

Following last month's discussion on various approaches to plotting a story, expect to hear members' plots unfold as the club pursues its quest for turning ideas into complete stories.
