A piece on Terry Engel was published in the American Literary Review. Don Money will have a story in Saddlebag Dispatches, and he won an Honorable Mention in a Tennessee writing contest. Barry Brown has a new book out, Animal Zoo, under the pen name Orso Marrone. The large print of Tales of the Western Trail is gaining a great deal in royalties.

There was a small discussion on future talks about A.I. and what to look for, as well as consideration for adding a “NO A.I.” notice on the website for contest submissions.

Steve May spoke on firsts: first sentences, first paragraphs, and first pages.

The assignment for next meeting: write a first paragraph for a story or bring one from a story you’d like to share.

Show Me Skulduggery

Death comes knocking once again in Show Me Skulduggery, the captivating third book in Ellen E. Withers’ award-winning ‘Show Me Mysteries’ series. These mysteries involve two eras, early 1900s, and contemporary times, featuring a famous saddlebred horse stable in Mexico, Mo. Intrigue, deception, underhanded behavior, and murder will keep you turning pages.
